ALLIED AIR FORCES ON THE RAMPAGE IN ALL THEATRES OF WAR, BLASTING ENEMY ON ALL THE WAR FRONTS

American War Planes Operating With Powerful U. S. Navy Fleet Units Extend Offensive Operations in The Marshall Islands, While Yank Ground Forces Convert Kwajalein Atoll Into Base from Which to Strike at The "Japs."

By International News Service

The Allied air forces were on the rampage today in all theatres of war, blasting the enemy from Russia to Rabaul and from Calais to Cassino.

American warplanes, operating with powerful U. S. Navy fleet units, extended their offensive operations in the Marshall Islands while Yank ground forces converted captured Kwajalein atoll into a base from which to strike other massive blows at the Japs in the central Pacific.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz revealed that the surface and air fleets pounded other islands of the archipelago, but he did not name the newly-assaulted atolls. He explained that this would be the policy in future sorties—withholding identity of the targets would deprive the enemy of information for the Jap communication lines.

De Lorenzo Re-Elected President of UAW-CIO

Thomas De Lorenzo yesterday was re-elected for his fourth term as president of Local 365, UAW-CIO, by the 12,000 workers of the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation.

But his margin of victory—a little more than 1000 votes—was the narrowest of his CIO career. His opponent was Al Olerio, UAW organizer, and former shop committee chairman of the Brewster plant at Long Island City. Olerio arrested De Lorenzo of violating labor's no-strike pledge.

De Lorenzo failed to carry the Johnsville plant, receiving only 1153 votes to Olerio's 1504. But the votes of the Long Island City plant were enough to carry him to victory.

Daniel Costello, a bitter critic of De Lorenzo, was elected vice-president by 1511 votes to 1108 for Earl Bruce. The latter was one of De Lorenzo's principal aides at the Johnsville plant.

All other members of the De Lorenzo ticket, were elected by an average majority of 1000 votes each. They are: Paul Krebs, re-elected recording secretary; Stanley Lucash, treasurer; Joseph Geramone, re-elected trustee; Irene Corkey, guide; Sid Traurig, Jack Oakes, Edward Costello and Daniel Healy, shop stewards. Gabe de Angelis was unopposed for financial secretary, and James McDevitt was unopposed for sergeant-at-arms.

WINS PROMOTION

John Earle Lynn, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Lynn, Second avenue, has received his promotion to corporal. He is stationed at New River, N. C., with the U. S. Marine Corps.

TRANSFERRED TO UTAH

Pvt. Dorothy L. Ritter, of the W. A. C., has been transferred from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., to Ogden, Utah. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ritter, Swain street.

Twice As Many Men To Be Called for Examination

Twice as many men will be called up for pre-induction examinations during March as in February, under orders received yesterday by State Selective Service headquarters.

That does not mean that twice as many registrants will be actually drafted, but it does indicate that the induction rate will be "stepped up considerably," an official said.

The majority of Pennsylvania draft boards are failing to meet their February quotas, it was learned, thereby increasing a deficit which has been growing for some months and which will have to be made up later.

Under the new orders, men who have not been reclassified from 2-A into 1-A can be called for examination, as well as men who are on replacement schedules for release during the next 60 days.

Boards whose February quotas are not sent to induction stations for examination before the middle of the month will receive supplemental calls for this month. Those sending men early in the month will receive extra large calls in March.

In the future, calls for actual induction to all boards will be based on the number of men available as shown by pre-induction examinations. That will make it virtually impossible for any board to be "short" on its quota.

A rumor that the induction age will be moved up from 38 to 45 during the next few months was current again yesterday among draft board members.

A spokesman for Selective Service said the rumor is an old one, but added that if the change were made it would "delay for an appreciable time" the induction of many fathers under 38.

RALPH C. REYNOLDS IS KILLED IN ACTION

South Langhorne Navy Man Meets Death in The Pacific Area

INJURED XMAS DAY

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Feb. 10—Ralph C. Reynolds, 23, who had been reported missing in action, met his death in an airplane crash according to information received during the past few days by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph G. Reynolds, Hulmeville avenue and Crescent street.

The young man, a member of the U. S. Navy and a radio gunner, had been a member of a plane crew made many runs from an aircraft carrier in the Pacific theatre of war.

He was injured by gun fire and

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Activities of Interest To All In The Various Communities

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

The Union Horse Company of Doylestown and Township and Vicinity for detecting and apprehending horse thieves and other villins, has "gone to the dogs."

Realizing that the detection and apprehension of horse thieves is a branch of police work that is out of date, 50 members of the Union Company attending the 109th annual meeting and banquet at the Fountain House in Doylestown on Saturday, voted to seriously consider "dog insurance" as new business.

The suggestion was made by the president of the company, Judge Hiram H. Keller, who announced that he had received the suggestion from Dr. R. C. Magill, of New Hope, who has advocated dog insurance on a number of occasions.

"You pay $2 or more for a dog license and dogs cost anywhere from nothing to hundreds of dollars; why not insure them?" Judge Keller asked. The committe on dog insurance will spread the idea to other organizations and will ask the support of the Bucks County Kennel Club.

Tickets printed 100 years ago in Doylestown were used at Saturday's affair for the delicious beefsteak dinner provided by Unioneer George Slotter.

During a meeting of the Warrington Township Fire Company in the fire house, at Neshaminy, William H. Smith, Samuel Lunick, David Volger, George J. Thompson, John C. Skerle, Fred Skerle,

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

One Senator's Choice

Washington, Feb. 8.

THE action of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., in resigning from the Senate to go into the army is the sort of thing those who know him well would expect from him. The act, itself, is admirable, but the way in which it was done is almost equally so.

—o—

THERE was no beating of his breast, no proud proclamations of patriotism, no talk of personal sacrifice. Mr. Lodge, in a brief note, merely resigned to the presiding officer of the Senate, giving as his reason that at his age (41) he felt he would be of more use as a combat officer abroad. Nor did he wait around after that to receive congratulations from his colleagues and friends. By the time they got the news he had gone.

—o—

PRIOR to his return to active army status, Mr. Lodge had a commission as major in the Reserve Corps, and in 1942 served abroad with an American tank unit attached to the British Eighth Army in its Libyan campaign. Late in 1942 he returned to the United States and was re-elected Senator from Massachusetts. There would have been no room for criticism had Mr. Lodge, abiding by the President's recent ruling that members of Congress may not also serve in the army, chosen to stay in the Senate. At least one member of the House compelled to make that choice between the army and his seat, elected to keep the seat.

—o—

THERE is, in fact, very high precedent for Government officials who, under such circumstances and at service age, chose to stay out of uniform rather than go in. For example, there is the case of President Roosevelt, himself. When we entered the last war Mr. Roosevelt (35) was six years younger than Senator Lodge. But, he did not resign as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, which was an appointive and not an elective office. And there

Write To Soldiers! Men Actually Cry for Mail

(This is the last of three articles about the Naval Transport Service.)

By Philip Reed

(U. N. S. Correspondent)

HONOLULU, Feb. 10—(INS)—More than one million pounds of airmail goes through Pearl Harbor every month by Naval Transport Service.

At one-half ounce per letter that is a lot of mail. It goes to and from soldiers and sailors scattered over thousands of lonely miles on island bases from Hawaii to Australia.

But it isn't enough.

The crying need for a constant stream of letters from home was brought out by Admiral William F. Halsey, supreme naval commander in the South Pacific. He told Lieut. Ben Edwards, transportation officer for NATS at Pearl Harbor:

"You get us the mail and we'll do the fighting."

To anyone fresh from home it is difficult to understand what a pepper-upper a letter can mean to a soldier or sailor stranded on an island some place in the South Pacific.

One lad explained it as his only tangible link, the only thing he could still grab on to and hold, with that certain someone back in the States for whom he was fighting and willing to die.

A soldier almost cried with regret when his thoughtful family sent him some candy. And he was starving for candy.

"Think of the space it took up," he said. "All those letters that could have been sent in place of it."

On the other hand a Marine at Munda let out a whoop when the sergeant doled him out a letter.

"A letter from mommy," he shouted.

"Who's Mommy," scoffed a hard-bitten guy nearby.

"Mommy," retorted the Marine, withering his buddy into red-eared silence, "is the most wonderful girl in the world and I've been married to her for four years."

The mail set-up in the Pacific is slightly different than in the Atlantic where V-Mail is virtually compulsory. Because of the number of isolated outposts where there are no V-Mail facilities and because of the reluctance of many men to entrust their innermost feelings to what they instinctively feel to be the public glare of a camera, the navy is encouraging use of airmail under certain circumstances.

Actually V-Mail transcription is completely impersonal.

So throughout the Pacific today are small bulletins urging the men to write their sweethearts and wives by airmail, their pals back home by V-Mail. So far the system is working, thanks to a great extent to some super-human mail service by the men in NATS.

They promise to take a normal increase in stride as the United States turns on more power in the Pacific. The only thing that will spoil it is indiscriminate use from either end of the airmail service.

CASE BEEN IN COURTS OF COUNTY 35 YEARS

Petition of Charles L. Taylor is Dismissed in The Dingee Estate

WANTS SEE PROPERTY

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 10—The Superior Court of Pennsylvania, on January 27th, handed down an opinion and decree affirming a decree of the Orphans' Court of Bucks County by Judge Boyer, in the matter of the appeal of Charles Langhorne Taylor, a Philadelphia attorney, in the Sallie B. Dingee estate.

The Bucks County Court has dismissed the petition of Taylor as executor of his brother, the deceased trustee in the Dingee estate, for an order to sell the Dingee homestead property, known as "Croydon Lodge," in Bensalem township, to satisfy personal claims of the trustee.

The request was refused on the grounds that the claims were not properly stated in the trustee's account and that the appellant has delayed presenting his petition for five years and then used that delay to gain an unjust, technical advantage over the beneficiaries.

This trust estate, reminiscent of Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce in Dicken's "Bleak House", has become noted in the courts of this county by reason of its repeated and almost continuous litigations since the death of its creator, Sallie B. Dingee, thirty-five years ago. It probably holds the record in Bucks county for longevity and as a prolific source of law suits—and the end is not yet in view.

FUNERAL TOMORROW

Funeral of Jacob Asta, who died on Thursday, is arranged for tomorrow at nine a. m., from his late home, 8 Lincoln avenue. Solemn Requiem Mass will be said in St. Ann's R. C. Church at 10 o'clock. Burial in St. Mark's Cemetery will be in charge of Galzerano, funeral director.

Announce Theme For The World Day of Prayer

The World's Day of Prayer to be held in St. James's Church on February 25th at eight o'clock, has for its theme "And the Lord wondered that there was no intercessor," taken from Isiah, 59th chapter.

The World Day of Prayer has been compiled from the statements and requests for special prayer presented at an assembly held last March, when 100 or more nationals, repatriated missionaries, relief workers, etc., from many different nations, as well as from the United States, were called together to "pool their concerns."

States a member of the committee planning the program: "This was an occasion of unusual spiritual fellowship, when the actual fate of the world might have seemed utterly crushing if the lifting power of God's presence at work in every land had not become increasingly clear, as person after person gave reason for 'the hope that is in him.' Of all the fellowships existant the one that has held the world together is that of the church. It is the one thing that does not change as the times change. Always responding to the cry and need of the people under all circumstances, it stands impregnable, 'the great rock in a weary land. All Christian women irrespective of denomination race, and tongue, are invited to join as 'one fellowship' in beseeching God's help in the solution of the great problem confronting the world!"

Urges More To Purchase War Bonds in This Drive

Mrs. John Leslie Kilcoyne, chairman for bond sales in Bristol and Bensalem, stated today that while the sales have been coming in fairly well, there are districts still showing very poor response.

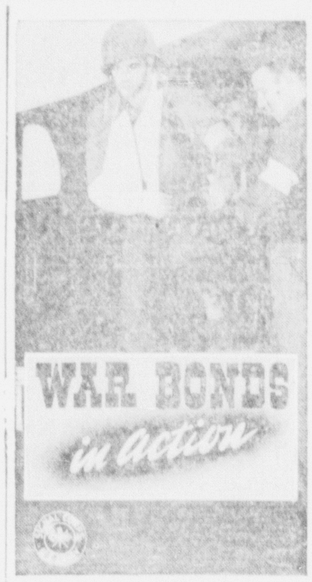

The quota for the two zones is $1,295,562.00, and "we have only a short time to meet this quota. In the last drive, we fell back 20%. Don't let the boys down this time! Many more have gone since then, and that means many more bonds must be sold. Remember, you are not giving—you are investing in the best security in the world, the United States Government. Let's all back our boys by Backing the Attack with War Bonds!!"

SUPPER MEETING

LANGHORNE, Feb. 10—The Young Adult Fellowship of Langhorne Methodist Church will participate in a supper meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hewins, South Langhorne, on Saturday evening at 6.30 o'clock.

NOT TO HOLD SUPPER

The Emilie Company of Safety has decided not to conduct its annual supper this year, due to rationing conditions.

Back from the front come our wounded boys, Maimed by the booby traps of Africa, Sicily, Italy, and the South Pacific, but ready and willing to carry on.

We on the home front make few sacrifices, but we must give our fighting men everything they need to carry on. You carry on with War Bonds. U. S. Treasury Department

'Little Girl's" Voice Summons Firemen

A "little girl" apparently is having fun with the Bristol firemen. On two different occasions now she has telephoned fire headquarters summoning the firemen to a certain address to extinguish a blaze. When the firemen arrived they found that they were the victims of a hoax.

Yesterday afternoon at about 12.30 the "little girl's voice" asked the firemen to "come to 1221 Pond street." The alarm was sounded and firemen and apparatus rushed to the location.

John H. Hardy resides at 1221 and there was no fire to be found.

SCOUTS OF THE COUNTY OBSERVING SCOUT WEEK

Court of Honor To Be Held At Doylestown Sunday Afternoon

OTHER ACTIVITIES

The installation of an air scout patrol at the Reformed Church in Sellersville tonight, window displays of scout equipment, scout craftwork and scout information, with special church services on Sunday, and scout and dad dinners at Chalfont, Quakertown and Lower Makefield, followed by the county court of honor on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m., in the Doylestown Court House, will be the features of Boy Scout anniversary week of Bucks county.

Scouts in various parts of the county, where requested by their local war bond committee chairmen, are taking part in the national boy scout pledge campaign. Beginning this week, scouts in troops throughout Bucks county are becoming part of the United States government dispatch bearer service, which will aid the war effort through distributions twice monthly of posters to stores, which have been previously signed up by the scouts.

At the court of honor on Sunday a new feature will be the presentation of a county court of honor award to all scouts who have joined during December 1943 and January and February of this year. This award will be presented by Dr. A. J. Strathie of Newtown. Thomas Ross of Doylestown, chairman of the Council's advancement committee, will preside at the court of honor.

Wedding Anniversary Is Marked by Localites

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Giampetro, Franklin street, entertained at dinner on Sunday in honor of their 7th wedding anniversary and the birthday anniversary of Mr. Giampietro.

13-Year-Old Twin Dies; Was Ill for 2 Months

A 13-year-old twin, ill for the past two months, died yesterday afternoon, three hours after returning from a Philadelphia Hospital. The deceased is Rita Josephine Barraco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Barraco, 1049 Pond Street.

The girl, a student of the seventh grade, Jefferson avenue school, had suffered an attack of grippe prior to the Christmas holidays. Her condition became more aggravated, and complications developed. Twelve days ago she was taken to St. Luke's Hospital, Philadelphia, where physicians informed her family there was no hope for her recovery. She was removed to her home in an ambulance yesterday shortly after noon, and three hours later suddenly passed away.

Rita has five sisters also surviving, her twin, Rina; Mary, Anna, Eva and Emma, all living at home.

The girl was born in Bristol, and was a communicant of St. Ann's R. C. Church.

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

Bloody Engagement On at Middle Dnieper Front

Moscow—One of the bloodiest armored engagements of the Russian war flared today on the middle Dnieper front between Nazi tank units attempting to rescue encircled German forces and Soviet mechanized forces tightening the grip of annihilation.

Fierce tank battles raged around the ring of steel forged by the Red army on a 20-mile front from Zvenigorodka to north of Shpola. Dozens of German attacks against the Soviet ring in a desperate attempt to rescue their virtually doomed comrades were repulsed by an impenetrable curtain of Russian fire.

Brunswick, Germany, Battered Thrice in Month

London—The vital Messerschmitt-producing city of Brunswick in north-central Germany was battered today for the third time within a month by American Fortresses spearheading the third straight daylight assault against the continent, carried out in apparently record strength.

Lancasters have also blasted Brunswick within the past month.

While hundreds of other Allied warplanes lashed at the invasion coast of northern France for the third successive time, the big Forts droned over the Reich to strike new blows at Brunswick, home of the Messerschmitt-110.

Liberator formations assaulted the enemy fighter plane base at Gilze Rijen in occupied Holland, European theater of operations headquarters announced.

Allies Repel 4 German Counter-Attacks

Algiers—Allied troops, definitely on the defensive, repelled at least four German counterattacks against their beachhead below Rome, and advanced slightly in one sector, Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson's headquarters announced today.

With the Fifth Army's left flank bearing the brunt of intensified enemy pressure as the initiative passed to the Germans, terrific fighting was in progress in the embattled Anzio beachhead. The German thrusts appeared to be in the nature of probing attacks seeking out weak spots in the Anglo-American lines.

One German counter-attack was repelled in the left coastal sector of the beachhead, while three small attacks against American positions west of Cisterna were stopped cold.

POSTWAR EUROPE

The Journal de Geneve predicts that Germany faces a postwar era of monotonous barracks-like dwellings to replace the 12,000,000 houses which it is estimated already have been smashed by Allied bombs. A writer for the Swiss journal says the German labor front already is studying plans for mass production of standardized dwellings to shelter the homeless millions.

Undoubtedly the demand for housing in Germany will be so great after the war that standardized houses will have to be built. Americans will have no reason to jeer at such construction because many residents of cities in this country have built what might be called standardized houses when opportunity offered to build almost any type. After a certain amount of prosperity returns to Europe following the war, the barracks-like dwellings there may be expected to give way to the work of modern architects who will be permitted to use their imaginations.

It has been said that when this war is over, Europe will be the New World and this will be the old. It appears that the prediction will be borne out. Many Russian cities will have to be entirely rebuilt. Many German cities must be constructed anew. And there are numerous cities in the conquered countries which have been almost wholly or partly destroyed.

It can hardly be expected that residents of European countries will be able immediately to redesign their cities and start building them anew. They will be handicapped by poverty and the urgent demand for housing of any type whatever. But when they do get around to the task of rebuilding them on the most modern plan, Europe will have the appearance of being the New World. And since there will be no reason to rebuild American cities, this country will, by comparison with Europe, be the old.

HEALTH DOWN ON FARM

Dr. A. R. Mangus, rural sociologist at New York State University, recently asserted that a popular belief that farm youths are healthier than their city cousins has been refuted by selective service figures. He said that rejection of farm workers in the 18 and 19-year-old brackets is running 62 per cent above the average for other registrants, and is higher than any other major occupational group in the nation.

He added that the defects which caused the greater number of rejections in this age group were bad vision, lack of mental balance, muscular or bone abnormalities, heart diseases, hearing deficiencies and hernia.

It is well known that cities depend upon rural areas for the growth of, and even the maintenance of, their populations. Can it be that for generations, the most healthy young men and women among the farm folk have been going to the cities, leaving the less rugged members of their families to rear children in the country? Certainly, no city person can see a reason why farm life should make for bad vision.

Allied Air Forces On The Rampage on All War Fronts

...to Tokyo and outlying Marshalls outposts already have been covered.

Nimitz revealed, moreover, that on the first day of the Kwajalein landings a single U. S. destroyer sank four Jap cargo ships with gunfire. These were the only enemy vessels known to have been encountered, both the Nipponese navy and air forces having declined to oppose the recent American operations.

In the Southwest Pacific, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's airmen carried out two more thunderous raids on the once mighty Japanese base of Rabaul. Heavy bombers, torpedo planes and dive bombers poured 129 tons more of high explosives on Vunakanau and Tobera airdromes at the stronghold which, during recent weeks of almost continuous bombardment, has been virtually stripped of enemy shipping and its once-formidable aerial defenses.

The Tokyo radio reported still another Allied air raid against the Rabaul base. However, this assault—"said to have occurred yesterday—was not immediately confirmed in official United Nations quarters."

On the ground in this theatre, the Americans advancing from Saidor on New Guinea were but a scant seven miles from tough Australian jungle fighters who reached and drove beyond Weber Point.

Over Europe, the air war against the invasion coast of France appeared under way again. Coastal observers along the English Channel coast reported huge aerial armadas sweeping toward the northern French shore, indicating that the Allies may be following up the assaults which during the last two days roared to a new peak.

Both on the battered beachhead south of Rome and in the outlying districts of Cassino, Fifth Army forces in Italy relied heavily upon their air support. American doughboys were locked in grim, house-to-house combat with the Nazis defending Cassino, while Anglo-American troops in the Anzio-Nettuno sector girded themselves for the enemy's all-out counter-attack.

Axis quarters reported Field Marshal Albert Kesselring already has launched his large-scale counter-thrust intended to hurl the Allies into the sea, but there was no United Nations confirmation of this report, either. German artillery had been pounding the beachhead, though, and the Mediterranean air force countered with as many as 1,500 sorties in a single day to cover the amphibious troops.

The Germans still held three-fourths of Cassino, although the Americans had attained a foothold in the north portion of the town. The Yanks also were within 75 yards of the peak of Mount Cassino.

In Russia, powerful tank and infantry forces of the Red army drove almost within artillery range of Luga and Krivoi Rog. Supported by Soviet aircraft, which had teamed with ground forces to shatter seven divisions defending fallen Nikopol, the Russians threatened soon to reach the outskirts of the Luga rail junction and the Krivoi Rog iron ore center. The Stalin troops also tightened their noose about remnants of ten German divisions encircled in the mid-Dnieper band.

Right now a soldier in New Guinea can and regularly does keep only eight days away by mail from his home in Chicago, Cleveland or New York. Eight days from the time the letter is dropped in the mail box a sweat stained, mosquito-bitten lad is momentarily transported by a few written words from the steaming jungles of New Guinea to home and normalcy. It may have come just in time to keep him from going completely bats.

One young soldier, shortly before leaving for the attack on the Gilbert Islands, was ordered not to write anything more until after the battle. The order came just after he had received a sharp note from his girl back home over his failure to write more often.

The youngster came back from Makin weeks later and found a letter from his sweetheart waiting for him. It had been a tough grind but here was a tearful earful. He read:

"Since you won't even answer my letters, I am sending under separate cover, your fraternity pin. . . ."

The supper will be served to volunteer solicitors in the social hall of Bristol Methodist Church at 6.30 o'clock. A nominal charge will be made to cover the cost of the repast.

Mrs. Leon J. H. Hutton, chairman of publicity for Bristol Branch of the Red Cross, will be the speaker; and a motion picture will be shown.

Walter Pitzonka, chairman of the war fund drive here, will give instructions for said drive.

The 1st of March will mark the official opening of solicitation of the residential group and retail business men.

The members of the canteen of Bristol Branch of the Red Cross will serve the supper, under direction of Mrs. David M. Sheerer, Jr.

Mohammedan Mosque Visited by Localite

lacking, due to the absence of our families and friends. Those of you at home probably missed our presence more than we did yours, simply because we had plenty to occupy our idle moments, one of which was work.

About once a month I manage to convince a few of the fellows that we should take more interest in our efforts to learn what kind of people we are living amongst, their habits and customs. This month it was January 25th. Five other "gobs" and I went on an official tour of the town by joining a number of other servicemen on a special excursion. It would take more time than I have to spare to cover the full journey, so I'll just mention some of the highlights.

Beyond all doubt, the Mohammedan Mosque we visited stood out as the most interesting of all spots we had the fortune of inspecting. In most parts of the world, where there are followers of Mohammed, admittance by Christians to these houses of worship is strictly forbidden. Unlike the churches of all other religious sects, the Mosque is far from being beautiful, as a matter of fact it has more or less a vacant look. You are probably curious as to what would strike us, as visitors, if it weren't the architecture, and I shall lose no time in telling. Because the center and major part of its flock of Mohammedism is in Africa, we as Americans know only what we read in books about it, or in some cases hear from people who have had the fortune (in both senses, money and luck) to visit this part of the world. Even with all this, most of us are ignorant as to just how they go about worshipping God and the founder of their beliefs, so I'll tell you what I saw on my visit.

The Arab, chief follower of Mohammedism, may go to prayer at any one of the five scheduled periods each day—dawn, noon, mid-afternoon, early evening and sunset. Upon entering the mosque he goes direct to the water fountains where he bathes from head to foot. When I saw them washing it reminded me of the numerous times I said all Arabs were dirty. Our French guide straightened us along these lines by informing us that non-religious Arabs are the filthy people. Because we were Christians, we were not permitted to inspect the bath houses. Separating that part of the floor which they believe in as being sacred and which is covered with rugs from the fountains is a narrow space of bare concrete. We as visitors walked only in this area, and the Arab may wear his shoes while treading upon it. From the bath rooms the believer in Mohammed goes to the rugs, taking his shoes off just before going out onto them—they pray with their hats on. It matters not which space on the carpets he chooses to pray on, as long as he faces the East, Mecca. Before starting the solemn word-of-mouth prayer he goes through a routine of motions similar to our physical drill for a few minutes, after that he perches on the floor with his legs crossed, and does the actual praying. It may all sound funny, but I admire these people for their ways of worshipping—it is almost an utter impossibility to distract their minds to anything else while they are at prayer. You are undoubtedly wondering where the women folk come in when speaking about the people as a whole. Well, they have the second floor to use, being they are never seen in public with their menfolk. One thing which entitles a lady to the same privileges as men is a visit to Mecca. I may have missed a few points, but I don't think so, in my vague description. . . .

We also visited a number of Moorish homes built during the time of the Turk-Arabic conflicts. These houses had two outstanding features. First, a good many of the walls, floors, staircases, doors and pieces of furniture were constructed of cedar and painted tile bought or stolen from the countries of Holland, Italy, France and Spain. They were very beautiful pieces of work, having been hand carved and shaped before arriving in these parts. The other feature is the way in which the home is built. Right in the center of the structure is a large patio, opened to the sky, with a small garden enclosed. . . .

The last night which I am going to describe before signing off is the locale which houses the lower classes of Arabs. It is a district of overcrowdedness, filth, dampness and many other points we don't usually associate with civilization. Our guide escorted us down a long flight of stairs, through streets of about three feet in width, and up isolated alley-ways. As we walked on we could see people gathered in small groups eating food that would turn an average person's stomach to smell or see—let alone eat; conversing and working. Sanitation is almost an unheard of luxury, and water is carried in by hand. In the sections where most of the workshops are located there is electricity, and that is the only place. Most of the homes are one-room structures — windowless — about as vacant as one of Mr. Davis's empty garages, except for a small stove. I could compliment these people only on one thing, their abilities in handicraft, for they put out some beautiful work. . . .

Life in Africa, as a whole, is still going swell, and the Red Cross is making sure that the best of entertainment is available at all times. Right at the moment I am listening to the radio, and I am in quite a comfortable spot, which is something most outfits do not have facilities to provide. I for one have no complaints about service in these parts. . . .

With regards for all,

Sincerely,
JAY.

also fatally hurt in a subsequent crash of the plane on Christmas Day, according to the message received from the War Department.

On the 21st of January the Reynolds family here had received word that young Reynolds was missing in action. The message this week verified the fact that he had been fatally wounded.

A graduate of Langhorne-Middletown high school, the young man was single and an only child. He had been in the navy for the past two years, and had gone overseas six months ago.

Prior to entering the service Reynolds had been employed as a crane runner and "Lukenwelder" at the Coatesville plant of Lukens Steel Co.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

have been others. To mention another conspicuous one—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York. Mr. Dewey is just about Mr. Lodge's age now. He was elected Governor in 1942, at the same time Mr. Lodge was re-elected Senator. Unlike Senator Lodge or Governor Stassen of Minnesota, who is 37 years old, Mr. Dewey did not resign to go into the armed service.

—o—

UNDOUBTEDLY his reasons, like those of Mr. Roosevelt, were adequate and there is no room for criticism. Anyhow, certainly, neither the voters of New York nor of the country have held it against either of them. Mr. Dewey's success in the 1942 election was repeated in 1943 when his Presidential prospects were concededly bound up in the cause of the Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor, whom he had personally sponsored. And, certainly, in the case of Mr. Roosevelt, the fact that though only 35 years old and then in perfect physical condition he held on to an ununiformed and important Governor job instead of seeking active military service not only did not hurt him politically but has never even been thought of as a criticism by his opponents. Quite obviously, neither he nor Mr. Dewey has ever felt his lack of military record a liability. All of which goes to show that Senator Lodge could have remained comfortably in the Senate without adverse comment or political risk.

THAT he, recently re-elected and with five more years to serve, should have taken the other course is the more to his credit. It proves, for one thing, that, lacking conceit, he does not consider himself an indispensable man. It proves, for another, that he has a pretty high personal standard of conduct—and lives up to it. Here he is, a man with an unmatched family tradition of public service (seven of his direct ancestors have been United States Senators) and with his own ability to carry on that tradition already assured. Yet, without pressure or prodding or any conceivable selfish motive, he throws up a career for which he is eminently suited, in which he is making a real success and for which he has an almost inherited title, to put on a uniform.

—o—

PERHAPS, AFTER the war is over he may be elected again to the Senate. But, no one can tell about that. No one can look forward politically that long. Once out of office it isn't so easy to get back. The incumbent always wants to stay and always has the advantage. There was no political risk for Senator Lodge in holding on to his seat; the political risk was in giving it up. His army service, no matter how creditable, may turn out later on to be no more of a political asset than the lack of army service has been a liability to either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Dewey. When the war is over the country will be full of heroes. Every State will have them. Just having been in the army will not mean a particularly advantageous position politically.

—o—

NEVERTHELESS, considering the political and uncriticized security of his position in the Senate and the examples furnished by other public men of his age who in the last war and in this one held on to that security, Senator Lodge's choice is a pretty fine one. It is refreshing to find one man in public life to whom holding on to his job is not the prime consideration; one man to whom this is not the matter of first importance; one man to whom other things seem paramount. Those seven Senatorial ancestors (most of them on his mother's side) need not feel ashamed of him because he quit the Senate. He is carrying on the tradition all right—and not in his paternal grandfather's groove either.

THE RED CARNATION by BURTON STEVENSON

SYNOPSIS

Antony Bigelow, composite New York columnist, and his old pal, Lieut. "Jim" Duffy, of the Homicide Squad, are faced with a grim cafe society mystery. The night before, Tony had seen a stranger bounced from Max's famed resort for causing a quickly suppressed scene at the table of Jack McKibben, mature broker-playboy. The assailant called "Mack" a "[illegible]". With the latter were the alluring Mrs. Lily Edgerton and a lovely unknown called "Leda" who looked scared. Tony warned Proprietor Max Riley that "something might happen" to McKibben, but nothing (except that table scene) had occurred. After McKibben, Lily and Leda left, the doorman told Tony that "a young fellow with something heavy" in his overcoat pocket had been asking for the broker. . . Next morning, Duffy called on the columnist and said that McKibben had shot and killed himself early that day. Duffy sees the columnist's "Wellwisher" letter tip; they discuss "Mack's" past. The detective is describing details of the supposed suicide.

CHAPTER SEVEN

"The house superintendent heard some knocking himself, then he sent for a wrecking tool and forced open the door. McKibben was lying on his back on the floor, dead. He still had on his evening clothes. There was an automatic on the floor beside him and a black scorched spot on his shirt front. We found afterwards that he had been shot through the heart. There hadn't been much blood. Rigor mortis had got down as far as his knees. The medical examiner said he had been dead nine or ten hours. We took photographs, of course, and went over the room. It hadn't been disturbed and the bed hadn't been slept in. The rest of the apartment was absolutely in order."

"Was the light on or off?" Tony asked.

"It was on."

"Fingerprints?"

"McKibben's. Here and there where you'd naturally expect to find them."

"On the gun?"

"We won't get much there. It's got a checked grip. But I sent it to the laboratory."

"Was it McKibben's gun?"

"His boy said he thought it was. McKibben kept it in the drawer of a table by his bed. He had a permit—I'll check with that. It had only been fired once. There were eight cartridges in the magazine and one in the breech."

"How about shells?"

"One on the floor in front of him. One bullet. It had gone clear through him and was on the floor under the body. Our ballistics bureau is checking it."

"How about the hand? Any powder stains?"

"I haven't had a report yet," Duffy answered. "You see, I read your column this morning just to find out who I ought to arrest," he added wryly. "So I thought I'd better come around and find out about that tip. Who was with McKibben at Max's place last night?"

"Lily Edgerton and a girl I didn't know."

"Your column says Lily is starting for Reno today."

"Yes, McKibben told me."

"He and Lily been palsies?"

"I think so."

"What was the other woman like?"

"Quite young—under twenty, I should say; slender, innocent-looking, no make-up. I couldn't understand why she'd be with McKibben. She looked sort of scared."

"Maybe she had reason to look scared," said Duffy grimly. "What time did they leave?"

"About twelve-thirty."

"As early as that?"

"Yes. I'd called McKibben over to my table and told him about the tip, and he left right away."

"Hum!" said Duffy. "Looks like he might have believed it. Maybe that's why he bolted himself in when he got home."

"Why should he do that, if he was going to shoot himself?" Tony objected. "Where did he go after he left Max's?"

"Don't know yet. Doorman says he came in about one-forty-five."

"It would probably take him that long to take the two women home."

"He only took one of them home. The other one came back with him."

"Lily wanted a last flutter, I suppose."

"It wasn't Lily," said Duffy. "It was the other one—young, innocent-looking. That's just what the doorman said."

Tony stared at him with a queer sinking feeling.

"Furthermore," Duffy went on, "she had met McKibben as he was coming out at eight-thirty or thereabouts and the [illegible] in a taxi together. Maybe she wasn't as innocent as she looked. A lot of them aren't."

Tony filled his pipe with fingers not quite steady. Duffy watched him with a smile.

"Seems to be quite a shock to you," he remarked. "Was she as wonderful as all that?"

Tony took a long puff and relaxed in his chair.

"I couldn't be mistaken about her, Jim," he said quietly. "She wasn't that sort at all."

"Not the sort to kill a man, eh? Just the same, she interests me."

"Not the sort to go to a man's apartment. Not the sort to be with Jack McKibben at all. How long did she stay when she came back with him?"

"I don't know. I haven't found anyone who saw her leave. Maybe she sneaked down by the stairs. It would have been easy enough at that hour of the night."

"But look here," said Tony, "if McKibben had been dead nine or ten hours when he was found, he must have been shot before two o'clock."

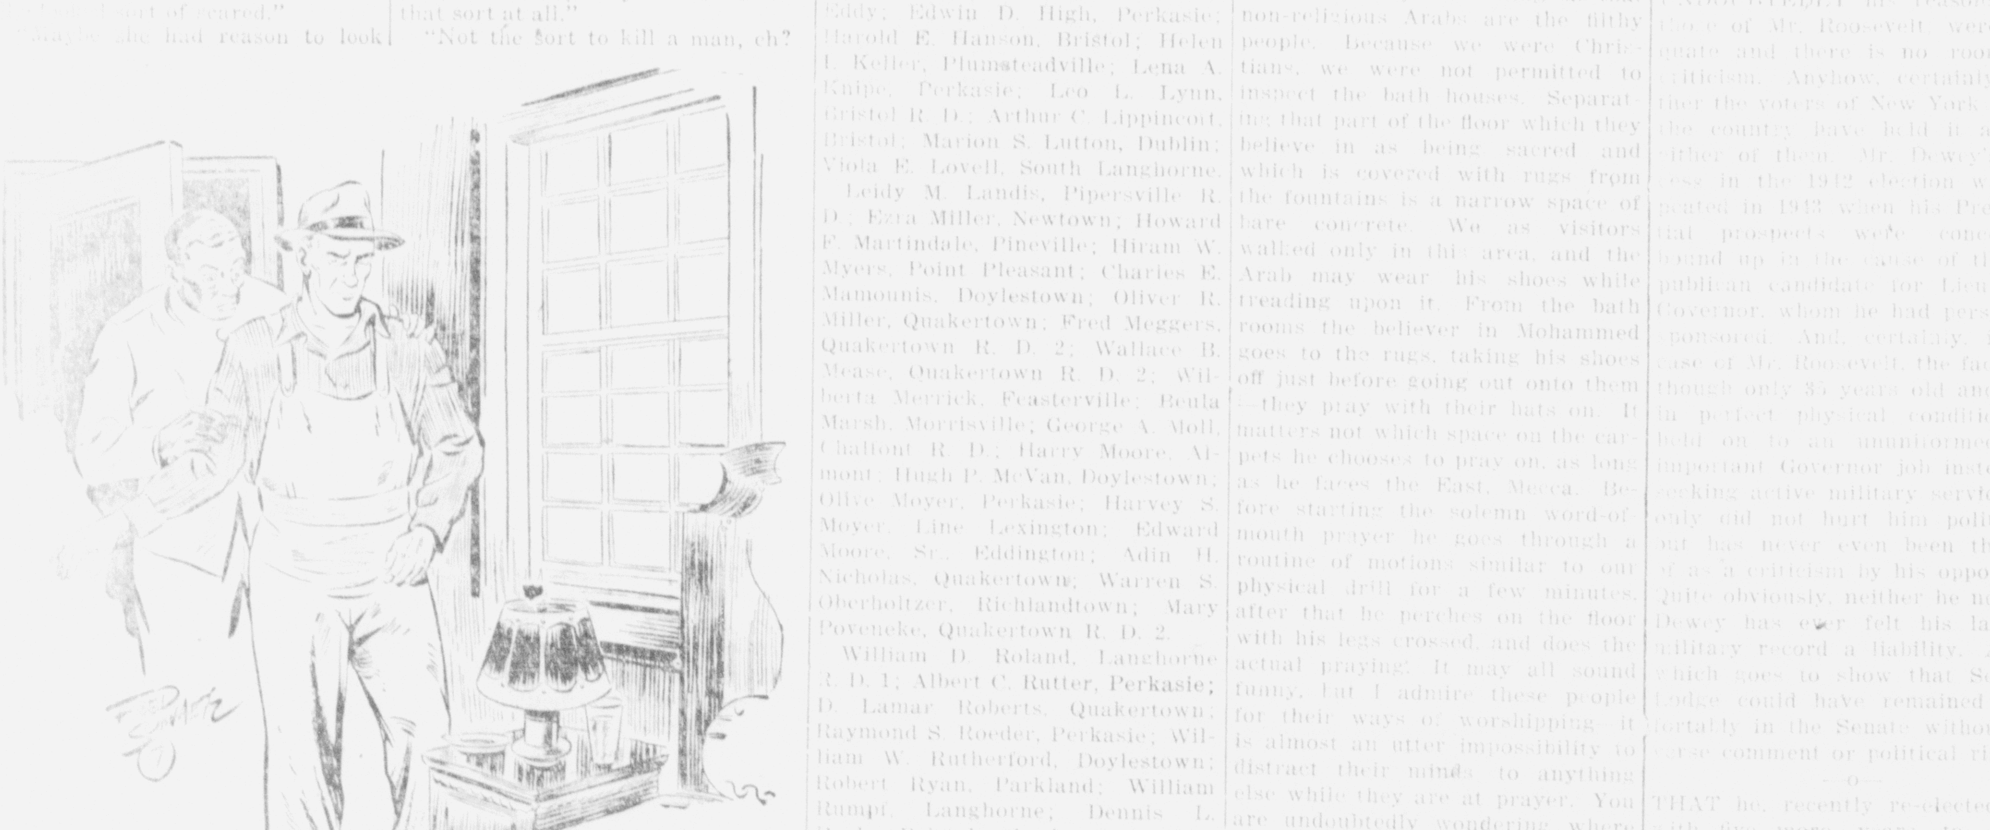

"Yes—right after he got in," Duffy agreed. He sat for a moment longer turning the case over in his mind, then got to his feet. "I must be getting along. First thing I'll run down the Edgerton dame. She can tell me who this innocent nymph is."

"Lily told me she didn't know."

"Didn't know?" echoed Duffy. "And you believed her? Not that it matters so much, since McKibben just bolted his door and shot himself. But maybe she can tell us what happened."

PASSANANTE'S SUPER MARKET

Owned and Operated by PASSANANTE BROS.

1039 Pond Street, Bristol

Will Close for the Duration

We regret exceedingly to make this announcement and we know our hundreds of customers and friends will be sorry to learn this news.

Our business, established 24 years ago by A. Passanante, grew and developed with Bristol. Our one desire has been to give the utmost in service. Our thousands of faithful customers will attest to the high quality of meats, produce and groceries sold in our store.

We are happy that in the twenty-four years here in Bristol we were able to maintain this service and we know our customers have been mutually happy with the realization that they received quality foods and at the same time saved on their food dollars.

Our decision to close came after long and tiring study. Present-day problems have made it impossible for us to be able to give the same fine service that our customers found here in the past . . . problems of personnel . . . problems of merchandise . . . and scores of kindred problems brought on by the war have led us to the decision to close for the duration.

When peace comes, and we pray it will be soon, you, our faithful customers and friends, may rest assured that we will again be back to serve you.

Until that time comes we want to say "thanks" for your patronage. It has been a genuine pleasure to serve.

THE CAPITOL WHIRL

A Digest of Things Political Occurring At Harrisburg

By International News Service

HARRISBURG, Feb. 10—(INS)—Capitol Hill politicians attach no significance to the meeting of the nation's Governors at Harrisburg May 28-31 just prior to the Republican National Convention at Chicago. . . . Gov. Edward Martin disavows any political aspirations and said the meeting was awarded to Pennsylvania because he had sought it a year ago at the Columbus, O., conference. . . . Some political circles hinted the Governor wanted to get the Republican Governors on home ground and line up support for a certain candidate at the convention. . . . Ulterior motives have been assigned by the Governor as well as G. O. P. leaders.

Former Gov. Arthur H. James can now be regarded as a "sure shot" for appointment to the State Superior Court by Governor Martin. . . . The former chief executive currently is serving as solicitor of Plymouth Borough in addition to his private law practice. . . . James, who served on the Superior Court bench from 1933 to 1939 when he resigned to take the Governor's chair, has a private law practice estimated to net him more than $50,000 a year. . . . A Superior Court judge receives $15,000 annually for a 10-year term.

Although the Democratic State Committee has endorsed a complete slate of candidates for the 1944 elections and leaders have pledged party unanimity, State Sen. John H. Dent, of Westmoreland, has hinted that another candidate may be in the field in the April 25 primary election for the $19,500-a-year Superior Court post. . . . Dent unsuccessfully attempted to rally support for Democratic Judge George H. McWherter, of Greensburg, elected to the Westmoreland County bench in 1942. . . . McWherter captured only 16 of the committee's 113 votes when the delegates met at Harrisburg as a nominating convention. . . . Dent, who dislikes the leadership of Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence, told the delegates that McWherter probably will enter the primary race as an independent candidate. . . . Following the balloting, Dent moved that the selection of U. S. Circuit Court Judge Charles Alvin Jones, of Pittsburgh, as unanimous—"for the record."

Secretary of Health A. H. Stewart has reported that the Health Department's nursing staff has expanded from one nurse in 1905 to 269. . . . Twenty-four nurses formerly on the payroll are with the Army and Navy nursing staffs, he added. . . . Stewart said that during the last 39 years the department's nursing prgoram has expanded from minor duties to include tuberculosis and venereal disease control, maternal and child health, midwifery, prenatal, orthopedic, nutrition, pre-school care, special health surveys, and special aid during disasters, emergencies and epidemics.

FLIGHTS TO GUATEMALA

NEW YORK—(INS)—The Pan American World Airways has announced that night flying between the United States and Guatemala, via Mexico City, will soon be started. Installation of night lighting equipment is underway. Brownsville, Texas, will be the focal point. Faster service to Panama will be one result.

FIGHT TYPHUS IN NAPLES

CAIRO, Egypt—(INS)—Naples, stricken with an epidemic of typhus, is getting a delousing on an unprecedented scale. The problem was inherited from the Germans and the menace is expected to extend through southern Italy. Rapid spread of the disease, despite expert medical attention, is attributed to over-crowding, lack of adequate housing facilities, an influx of refugees and lack of water and gas because of Nazi demolitions.

SOMETHING TO JAW ABOUT

SEATTLE—(INS)—Patrolman J. A. Topman has decided that there are times when a man doesn't need a doctor. Thoroughly disgusted, and open-mouthed perforce, after futilely seeking relief for his dislocated jaw at the city hospital, he leaned his chin on his hand and the jaw snapped back into place.

JOHNSTOWN—(INS)—David C. Plowman, Cambria County's last Civil War veteran, began his 98th year by predicting he would live to see the end of World War II. Plowman witnessed the surrender of Lee at Appomattox and shook hands with Lincoln in the White House.

THE PAY-OFF

Employees at the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Washington are getting a big kick out of the story about the little boy who wanted $100 very badly and decided to pray for it. He prayed for several weeks with no results; so he wrote a letter to God. The post office finally decided to forward the letter to the White House and it was shown to President Roosevelt, who chuckled and ordered $5 sent to the boy. The lad was delighted that his earnest prayers had been answered, in part at least, so he wrote a thank-you to God, but added this P. S.: "I noticed you routed your letter through Washington, and as usual those bureaucrats deducted 95 percent."—Jerry Klutz in Washington Post.

Men, Women! Old at 40,50,60! Want Pep?

Want to Feel Younger, More Vim?

Don't always blame exhausted, worn-out, rundown conditions on age. Thousands, only 40, 50, 60, feel pepless, old, solely because body is deficient in iron. Ostrex Tonic Tablets supply real medicinal doses of iron, 2½ TIMES minimum daily nutritional requirement! Also vitamin B_1, TWICE minimum daily nutritional requirement. So if you have no disease or real old-age infirmities, and yet feel exhausted, pepless, old, solely because body lacks iron, try this way to feel peppier, younger, today. Good news! 35c. Introductory size Ostrex only 29c! At all drug stores everywhere—in Bristol, at United Cut Rate. (Advertisement)

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)
Pastor
Bristol Presbyterian Church

O Lord and Father of all Mankind, we pray Thy blessing upon those consecrated servants of Thine who have dedicated their lives to the development of the spiritual experience of our men and women in the armed forces. Help them, O God, as they live in the midst of their people, and help them to awaken in the hearts and minds of the men and women a sense of Thy nearness and a realization of their need for Thee. As they face trials, hardships and even death, may they feel thy nearness and experience the presence of Thy Holy Spirit. Thus may Thy Kingdom be advanced, and Thy Name be glorified around the world. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—(INS)—Officials of the Pittsburgh Convention and Tourisst Bureau apparently stuck a feather in their hats a little prematurely over a convention of the National Poultry Club, to be held locally. Acting on a tip, they advertised the meeting extensively only to find the conclave had been postponed.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

Fun and uproar dominate the Bristol Theatre screen, where the laugh-fest, "Pistol Packin' Mama," is showing today.

Any picture titled "Pistol Packin' Mama" has a lot to live up to considering the phenomenal success of the song of the same title.

RITZ THEATRE

Unpredictable Acquanetta furnishes another surprise for film fans currently viewing her first major screen role, in "Captive Wild Woman," at the Ritz Theatre.

The voluptuous actress undertakes a difficult role in the horror drama, which introduces her to audiences as its title character.

Acquanetta is the surprising young lady who, posing as a Venezuelan, captured Hollywood as she had previously attracted Broadway, and made her debut in the Technicolor hit, "Arabian Nights."

GRAND THEATRE

"The Fallen Sparrow" which came to the Grand Theatre yesterday, with Maureen O'Hara and John Garfield in the stellar roles, is the sort of movie that tempts one to describe it in superlatives.

It's an thrilling a story of hard-boiled love making, clever detective work and perilous counter-spy adventure as the screen has served up for a long time. It's absorbing escape entertainment, calculated to make the spectator forget his troubles and sure, at intervals, to make his hair stand on end!

SHOPPING TIPS FOR BUDGETEERS

GET YOURS while they're plentiful—good fresh vegetable and flower seeds. The Snellenburg Gardening Corner (1st fl.) is noted for having the best of early seeds. I looked them over in the unpacking, was delighted to find that all of them were tested as late as January, '44. Even the scarce seeds are here—such as onions. Onions have been market-scarce, so plant your own. Practically every usual vegetable seed is present in the Snellenburg collection. That takes unusually clever merchandising these days. All packets come from leading, trustworthy seed houses. Now make a list and mail it to Snellenburgs promptly. 10c a package.

DO YOU KNOW about the utterly charming bedroom pictures—decorator quality—which the Snellenburg Art Dept. (4th fl.) is showing for inexpensive wedding gifts (by the pair for weddings) or for just giving a joyous note to our own bedrooms? They're delightful. Very modern "Colonial" in subject. All pastels, and with frames that blend both with the pictures and with the bedroom rugs and drapes. Only $2.95 each.

DRESSMAKERS! There's a new and generous selection of the better yard cottons to be had in the Snellenburg Cotton Goods Dept. (2nd fl.) The season's piques are stunning, coming in both fine whale and waffle weaves, and in lovely floral patterns. 36 ins. in width. Whale weaves, 59c per yd.; waffle weaves, 69c. Nearby are those incredibly fine "Lady Lyke" muslins, semi-sheer. For afternoon or morning frocks, yes, and for summer evenings, 59c a yard. Monotones, multi-colors, geometrics and florals. All three materials can be used for young or old. If you don't know—the "Lady Lykes" have a "Bellmanized" permanent, lintless finish. They wash crisply without starch, iron while damp, have a pre-shrunk residual shrinkage of only 2%. Wonderful?

DO YOU LIKE 20th Century Modern bedroom furniture? Here is an opportunity to get three good - looking pieces for $150! There's a full-sized bed, 3-drawer dresser and 5-drawer chest. The rich, cheerful finishes, "autumn tan" and "pencil striped walnut" are veneers upon durable, hard gumwood. The shop will accept $30 down, with a small carrying charge, for your convenience. Snellenburgs. (5th fl. Furniture Dept.)

RIGHT PRICES in neckwear are in evidence at the Snellenburg Neckwear Dept. At the same time the dainty things are particularly desirable and appeal to the well dressed. Dickies I'd love to collect, in both severe tailored styles and flattering lace-trimmed styles, come at $2.85 and $3.85. Two of the best groups in town. (Neckwear Dept., 1st fl.)

ULTRA-ULTRA are the California designed and made 100% wool suits, in happy colors, that up-and-coming Suit Corner of the Snellenburg Store is showing for present wear. The suits are of such a weight as to be equally appropriate for summer. The lines and tailoring are exceptional in a casual suit at this price—$22.95. Misses' sizes. (Suit Dept., 2nd fl.)

ARE THEY SELLING! I'll say! Folks are buying these modern single divans for living rooms, bedrooms, emergency guest equipment, and the like, and soon they'll be wanting them for summer cottages. They can cost only about half of the price for an average studio couch. Although the shop has more luxurious types up to $78.90, the economy model I am describing is priced at but $19.75. It can be used as it is, in its attractive cotton upholstery covering, or slip-covered, or spread with bed linens. For sheer usefulness, it's really priceless. Snellenburgs. (5th fl. Furniture Dept.)

AN EARLY THRILL is in store for those of us canny enough to start our gardens — even vegetables—on our indoor window sills. It's time right now! That good Gardening Dept. on the Snellenburg first floor is providing treated, fabricated window boxes—"seed starters," they call 'em—in three sizes, at simply ridiculous prices. Each comes folded in a colorful package, with complete instructions. These boxes, by the way, are self-watering! There are three sizes at three prices. The middle size, at 29c, contains, for example, one two-compartment seed starter and two transplant boxes, the latter having 12 transplant pots and sub-irrigator, and, finally, a complete set of growing instructions. You don't have to know a thing about window gardening to have success—just follow directions—and have fun in raising your own flowers or vegetables. The smaller and larger sets cost, respectively, 15c and 79c. Why not send for all three? You can't go wrong! (1st fl. Garden Corner.)

STRONG LAST-HALF FINISH GIVES THE R. & H. FIVE VICTORY

Bristol Team Defeats The Riverside All-Stars By Score of 43 to 37

JERSEYITES HAD LEAD

Kanigowski Led Team To Roll Up 13 to 9 Lead In First Half

A strong second-half finish gave the Rohm and Haas quintet its twenty-first straight victory last night on the Social Club floor. The losing team was the Riverside All-Stars, 43-37, the tilt being a Bristol-Burlington League affair.

The Jersey boys, thanks to some fine shooting by Kanigowski amassed a 13-9 lead over the locals in the first half. The chemical mixers had several opportunities to take the lead in fouls but were off and could sink but five in 14 tries.

But in the third and fourth periods, the Maple Beach aggregation found its eye and soon overtook the riverside lead. It was the second half shooting of "Bliz" Wollard and Jesse Vanzant that carried the Bristol team to victory, Vanzant scoring eight points. Carll maintained the Riverside pace by scoring five double-deckers in the second half to make him high man for the night with 12 points. Vanzant's total for the night was 11 points.

The winners were also off in their foul shooting in the second half as they made but two in ten tries to bring their total to seven out of 24. Murphy had four of the foul goals.

In the preliminary game, the General Electric girls' team won over the Rohm and Haas sextet, 23-13.

BASEBALL FANS TO HELP PICK NAME FOR PHILA. CLUB

$100 War Bond is Offered To the Winner of The Contest

IN NEED OF EMBLEM

Team Has Been Known By Many Names Since Its Organization

Baseball fans of the Bristol area are invited to help select a new name for the Philadelphia National League club and at the same time enter the contest which will see an award of a $100 war bond go to the winner and 1944 season passes to the three persons whose suggestions the judges think are best. The judges will consist of sportwriters, radio commentators and club officials.

Bob Carpenter, new president of the Phillies, made the announcement that he wants the followers of the team to help select the emblem. As far as he is concerned, the name Phillies suits him fine. In fact, the Phillies are the only to the Philadelphia National League Club, 1906 Packard Building, 15th team in the majors whose nickname is a contraction of the city it represents. However, the Philadelphia club has no mark of identification other than its name and it would like an emblem such as the Cardinals in St. Louis, the Cubs in Chicago, or the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Since the club joined the National League in 1876, the team has been known by many names. At various times they have been referred to as the Quakers, the Keystones, and often the Phils. When John Lobert was manager in 1942, the club officially shortened the name to the Phils but last season they again became the Phillies.

The club officials have announced some very simple rules for the contest. All names and insignias or emblems submitted become the property of the Philadelphia National League Club; the decision of the judges is final; the contest closes Sunday, February 27, 1944, and in the event of two names being similar, the earliest postmark will decide the winner; letters should be limited to 100 words.

All entries should be addressed and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia 2, Pa.

GUNNER PAYS FINE, SHOOTING AFTER DARK; PAYS $69.55

Charged with Illegal Possession, Failure to Display License

GUARD AT BREWSTER

Arrest Was Made by State Game Protector Geo. W. Freas

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 10—Charged with shooting a rabbit after dark, being in illegal possession of game and failing to display a license tag on his coat, "Buster Brown" Mershon Lanzaze, 33, of 3882 Terrace street, Philadelphia, was fined $69.55 on Saturday by Justice of the Peace William Wrigley, at Edison.

Lanzaze is sergeant of the guards at the Johnsville plant of the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation. He was arrested by State Game Protector George W. Freas, of Horsham, and charged with shooting the rabbits on the airplane factory grounds on January 11th, when he was arrested and had the hearing continued until Saturday.

Constable I. D. Derstine, who is employed at the Brewster plant, was a witness against Lanzaze. One dead rabbit was found on the plant grounds at Johnsville—shot in the eye.

Lanzaze was also found in possession of a rabbit and when asked where it came from, he stated at the hearing that he raised them at home, it was a tame one, and he was selling them to some fellows at the plant.

DISPATCH TO ALL STOREKEEPERS . . .

From the fighting fronts to the merchants of this city comes a desperate plea—SAVE WASTE PAPER!

Paper to make bomb rings, shell containers, helmet linings—to pack and protect food, ammunition, and blood plasma. Over 700,000 items needed by our armed forces are made of paper or wrapped in it.

So urgent is the need for waste paper that today it tops the list of all the materials critically needed for war.

In retail stores in this city tons of precious waste paper are daily being destroyed. Used wrappings, cartons, packing boxes, old bills and records are being burned or thrown away when they should be going into the muscle and sinew of our war machine.

Save every scrap of waste paper—bundle it—phone this newspaper for collection information. Do it today!
